Wall Street falls as bond market intervention effects fade, Walmart results disappoint

Major U.S. stock indexes suffered sharp declines as a brief reprieve in the bond market abruptly reversed. Despite recent efforts by the Treasury Department to boost long-term government debt buybacks, investor anxiety over persistent inflation and rising national debt pushed 10- and 30-year Treasury yields higher, weighing heavily on equities.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent indicated that the government could further increase Treasury buybacks to stabilise the debt market amid concerns over the widening fiscal deficit. The Treasury had announced plans to double buybacks of 10- to 30-year debt to at least USD 4 billion per operation.

Walmart stock dropped roughly 9% even after beating revenue expectations and raising its full-year outlook, as the retailer reported its weakest sales growth in over six years. Consumer discretionary and staples shares underperformed after Walmart reported weaker-than-anticipated guidance.

The Trump administration is reportedly considering reducing tariffs on Canadian automobile imports from 25% to 15% as part of a broader strategic trade agreement. In return, Canada is expected to withdraw its retaliatory measures.

Crude prices rose to one-month highs after President Trump threatened 'tremendous economic consequences' on nations trading with Iran, adding a geopolitical risk premium. The EPA also issued an early waiver to boost gasoline supply as pump prices remain elevated near $4.10/gallon nationally.

Energy stocks emerged as a rare bright spot in the market amid significant gains in oil prices.

Cryptocurrencies decoupled from the drop in equity markets, with Bitcoin and Ethereum posting massive gains. The rally was fueled by positive sentiment from a White House summit, alongside a concentrated short-covering event that triggered over $1 billion in liquidations within a very brief window.

Weekly jobless claims fell to 206,000, and the Philadelphia Fed manufacturing survey jumped to a five-year high of 47.4.

The Indian rupee also snapped a three-day losing streak, gaining 5 paise to close at 95.7 yesterday. The recovery came as a wave of selling pushed the U.S. dollar to multi-month lows against major currencies. The sharp reversal was triggered by a U.S. Treasury intervention that pulled long-term bond yields lower, weakened the greenback and sparked a strong rally in regional Asian currencies.

India allowed duty-free imports of up to 1 million tonnes of raw sugar until October 31 under a Tariff Rate Quota, marking the country's first sugar imports in nearly a decade. The move aims to ease domestic supply pressures and contain elevated sugar prices.

Asian markets opened lower today but are now recovering, tracking a sharp pullback on Wall Street as long-dated U.S. Treasury yields rebounded.

Nifty snapped its seven-session losing streak, rising 153 points to close at 24,231 yesterday.

The rebound helped Nifty reclaim its near-term averages, signalling improved near-term momentum. Importantly, Nifty sustained above the crucial 24,000 support zone, which coincides with the 61.8% retracement of the previous upswing and an upward-sloping trendline connecting the April, June, and July swing lows on the daily chart.

Sustained buying above 24375 will be crucial to negate the prevailing short-term downtrend and open the door to further recovery. Until then, the 24,000–24,050 band is likely to remain a key support area, while 24,300–24,375 may act as the immediate resistance zone.

Indian equities are set for a mildly positive note on conducive Asian cues.

Japan factory activity accelerates in Aug as chip, AI demand boosts orders

Japan's factory activity expanded at a faster pace in August, driven by a surge in new orders and robust overseas demand, particularly from semiconductor and artificial intelligence-related industries, a flash survey showed The S&P Global flash manufacturing PMI rose to 55.1 from 54.5 in July, meeting expectations. Manufacturers recorded their quickest increase in new orders since January 2018, while export orders also rose at their fastest pace since the start of 2018, S&P Global said.

Japan CPI rises in July, core inflation grows but stays below BOJ target

Japanese consumer price index inflation grew in July, with core inflation also advancing but remaining just below the Bank of Japan's annual target. Core CPI, which excludes volatile fresh food prices, grew 1.8% year-on-year in July, data from Statistics Bureau showed on Friday. The print was in line with expectations and picked up from the 1.6% seen in the prior month. Headline CPI inflation rose to 1.9% year-on-year from 1.6% in the prior month.

UK consumer confidence jumps to two-year high, GfK says

British consumer morale jumped to a two-year high this month as households became more confident about making major purchases, a survey showed on Friday that added to a run of unexpectedly strong economic data. GfK's Consumer Confidence Index rose to -14 from -17 in July, against expectations in a Reuters poll of economists for a fall -18.

Weekly U.S. jobless claims dip to 206,000

The number of Americans applying for first-time unemployment benefits edged down by more than expected last week, but stayed mostly rangebound, suggesting that the labor market remains on stable footing despite surprise job losses in July.

U.S. initial jobless claims dipped to 206,000 in the week ending on August 15, compared to an upwardly revised reading of 212,000 in the prior week. Economists had predicted the figure would come in at 210,000.

UK factory orders show best performance since November 2024, CBI survey shows

A gauge of British factory orders rose this month to reach its highest level since November 2024, adding to wider signs of resilience in the economy despite the ongoing fallout from the Iran war, a survey showed on Thursday.

The Confederation of British Industry's monthly order books balance rose to -25 in August from -45 in July, which had been the joint-lowest reading since the COVID-19 pandemic.

While still signalling a deterioration in order books, the 20-point jump marked the sharpest improvement in more than five years and was one of the biggest since records began in the 1970s.

Chart with Interesting Observations

The Rise of Private Buyers and the Higher-Yield Era

- Official demand for U.S. Treasuries has become significantly less dominant, with private investors now accounting for around 73% of the Treasury market, compared with roughly 50% a decade ago. This structural shift means the market is increasingly dependent on price-sensitive investors to absorb government debt, potentially requiring a higher yield premium than in the past.
- The key distinction is that official buyers were generally less sensitive to yield levels, whereas private investors demand adequate compensation for duration, inflation and fiscal risks. As the investor base becomes increasingly private-sector driven, Treasury yields may need to remain structurally higher to attract sufficient demand. In essence, the changing ownership structure of the Treasury market is an important reason why the yield premium may remain elevated versus historical norms.
